Von John Angell James : A Help to Domestic Happiness (English Edition) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Help to Domestic Happiness (English Edition):

Kundenrezensionen Hilfreichste Kundenrezensionen 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Best book on the home outside the Bible itself Von Ein Kunde I wish we would have had this book when our children were young. It's written in the language of the early 1800's, but well-worth the "struggle" to read it. If you're a Christian, this is must reading, especially if you have children, or grandchildren. Pass it on to those you love.

Kurzbeschreibung John Angell James, (1785-1859) was a staunch Calvinist in doctrine and beautifully balanced his convictions with practical piety in his life and his ministry. He preached and wrote to the common man and woman of every age group and station in life, and was known for saying, "I write plain truths, in plain language, for plain people!". He was held in high esteem as a preacher and author, yet he was a humble and unpretentious man. His book, A Help to Domestic Happiness, was first published in 1830, but is still a blessing to many. This edition includes an Active Table of Contents.

ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende John Angell James (6 June 1785 - 1 October 1859), was an English Nonconformist clergyman and writer. He was born at Blandford Forum. After seven years apprenticeship to a linen-draper in Poole, Dorset, he decided to become a preacher, and in 1802 he went to David Bogue's training institution at Gosport in Hampshire. A year and a half later, on a visit to Birmingham, his preaching was so highly esteemed by the congregation of Carrs Lane Independent chapel that they invited him to exercise his ministry amongst them; he settled there in 1805, and was ordained in May 1806. For several years his success as a preacher was comparatively small; but he became suddenly popular in about 1814, and began to attract large crowds. At the same time his religious writings, the best known of which are The Anxious Inquirer and An Earnest Ministry, acquired a wide circulation. He was one of the founders of the Evangelical Alliance and of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. Municipal interests appealed strongly to him, and he was also for many years chairman of Spring Hill (afterwards Mansfield) College. He was also an ardent slavery abolitionist, and is portrayed in the huge canvass depicting Clarkson's opening address at the world's first International Anti-Slavery Convention in 1840, in the National Portrait Gallery, London. He died in Birmingham.
