Kurzbeschreibung At the end of the Second World War Hungary became a Russian 'protectorate' without the consent of the population. Communism was established by stealth and the borders were closed. It was not possible to get a passport and leave the country. The only way to escape was crossing the border on foot which was both illegal and very dangerous. In the late autumn of 1949 after our failed attempt I lay paralysed by polio in an isolation ward while my mother was in prison. After the Hungarian Revolution of 1956 was crushed by Russian forces and all hope of freedom vanished thousands of people fled across the Austrian border. My mother realised that she had a chance to leave Hungary again....
