In disagreement with his presidentVon BenedictuThe best known citation of the secretary of state Robert Lansing concerning the terms of the treaty of Versailles goes as follows:"Examine the Treaty and you will find peoples delivered against their wills into the hands of those whom they hate, while their economic resources are torn from them and given to others. Resentment and bitterness, if not desperation, are bound to be the consequences of such provisions. It may be years before these oppressed peoples are able to throw off the yoke, but as sure as day follows night the time will come when they will make the effort."
