Magical Von Christiane This is a perfect gem of a tale of romantic adventure - Mark Twain's writing is pure magic with wonderful descriptions and fine humour. The time is the end of the reign of Henry VIII, an age of wild superstition, brutal punishment, fantastic pomp and splendour at the court and abject poverty among the people. On the eve of Henry's death Prince Edward VI, soon to be king, meets and changes places with poor mistreated Tom Canty. Each boy has to find his way in the other's life and though obviously their experiences had been worlds apart they have in common a good heart, a sense of justice and sound sense. They meet all manner of characters and turbulent events take place in quick succession up to a very satisfying climax.
