became obvious early on that much of what he says is unsubstantiated. Despite his assurances that he checked the accuracy of every statement, it became clear to me that that Jeffrey has a) not checked his sources b) has made numerous mistakes himself, and c) has made things up ... One whole chapter, the patterns of "sevens" in nature on page 240 is completely unsubstantiated. He claims 7 colours in the spectrum when there are actually a number approaching infinity; He claims seven whole tones in a musical scale - there are actually tones and semitones; He claims human gestation is 40 weeks (a multiple of seven) - but that number is an average; He claims almost all animals have gestation periods as a multiple of seven - I haven't found one. Of the animals he mentions, different breeds have different gestation periods. Chapter 11 deals with the controversial "Yeshua Codes" in the Old Testament. Without resorting to lengthy arguments, he should be aware that Rev. Moon's name appears much more frequently in the Codes than does Jesus' name. Chapter 12 is drawn entirely from Ivan Panin's Bible Numerics. Again this approach to scripture ("see how the numbers add up? only God could make it work out that way") has been rejected by most Christians. It should be pointed out that Panin published a Greek text of the New Testament with the text fudged to make his numerics work out. On p. 44, he quotes Gen 41:57 "And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands." Next he SPECULATES that Joseph had to be "careful" in selling the grain (which the text does not say). He then introduces an inscription from Yemen in which a woman could not purchase any grain from someone named Joseph for any price. Then Jeffrey says that this inscription "REVEALS JOSEPH'S DETERMINATION TO RESIST ANY APPEAL FROM A STRANGER OFFERING GOLD..." (p. 35) So Jeffrey twists what the Bible says to prove an inscription is talking about the Biblical Joseph. Rather than using the inscription to prove the bible is true, he uses the bible to prove the inscription is talking about the Biblical Joseph. On p. 111, Jeffrey claims that God's resting on the 7th day demonstrates the Law of Conservation of Energy. I have a degree in Science and I haven't been able to figure this one out yet. On p. 114, Jeffrey claims that the Bible revealed the exact number of stars in the cluster known as Pleiades at a time when the true number of stars was unknown. It is called the "7 stars" in Hebrew. Jeffrey claims that humans can only see 6 yet he says that modern astronomy has confirmed the existence of 7, thus verifying the truth of the Bible. However, people can see as many as 9 stars with the naked eye (depending on conditions), and the most recent observations confirms that there are in fact hundreds of stars. I have personally seen data (magnitude, nebulosity, etc.) tabulated on 11 of them. And on p. 117 he says that, "Throughout history most people assumed evaporation of water from lakes and rivers was responsible for clouds....Incredibly, a recent study by the United States Department of Agriculture proved that most of the water that forms into the clouds worldwide comes from the ...oceans." Thus proving Ecc 1:7. Is he making this up??? Were people so stupid as to believe that clouds were formed by evaporation from rivers and lakes but NOT oceans? Is cloud formation as a result of the evaporation of ocean water only a recently established fact? Besides, the language of Ecc 1:7 could just as well be speaking of the Dead Sea. Lest I sound like I have an axe to grind against Grant, I am only concerned about his book. It is imperative that when we attempt to demonstrate the reliability or even the inspiration of the Bible Christians need to be intellectually honest. To an inquisitive non-Christian, Jeffrey's book will do more harm than good, and will give Christians and Pentecostals a bad name. The questionable method of research and writing employed by today's popular "prophecy" teachers does not lend itself well to the discipline of apologetics. Jeffrey would do well to rewrite his book or leave it to someone else more qualified.

When I saw the title of this book, I picked it up hoping that I might find some interesting historical fact to back up claims that the Bible is true. Instead I found nothing more than one man's attempt to spread unfounded propaganda under a guise of legitimacy. Jeffrey (the author) is obviously writing to a target audience of Christians with conflicts in their faith, and it comes through in his extremely biased, judgemental writing style. Several times while reading the book, I actually felt insulted by some of the comments made about those who are not Bible-thumping Christians. Jeffrey offers no substantial proof, although he insists that it is out there. It angers (as well as saddens) me that I was denied this so called "factual information." He also goes on to try to prove the Bible's historicity with text from the Bible, which as we all know, proves nothing; and then proceeds to drop names of influential Christians as if we will believe that what he is saying is true simply because these people thought so. Most of Jeffrey's sources are completely outdated, and any thinking person can see that there is no substantial proof in this book as to the historicity of the Bible. Again, I had been hoping to find some factual information as to the authenticity of the Bible, as I am sure many others who have read or want to read this book are. This is not the book in which to find it. If you ask me, this book does nothing more than preach to the choir, and it was a waste of money and paper to publish.

I have read several books written by Grant Jeffery. [Armageddon, Messiah, Heaven, Final Warning, and The Signature of God.] I was very inspired by his books. However, after reading The Signature of God, I realized that I was being fleeced of my hard earned money. The book, although inspiring for the blind and the unlearned as well as those with a bad case of cognitive dissonance, was a total disappointment and a wake up call for me! Hidden Bible Codes? How ridiculous! I wanted to believe to strengthen my faith. Now I know my faith can only be in God and His Word! Man perverts His Word and adds to it or subtracts from it. There is no rhyme or reason to the codes. It is obviously a Talmudic plan to fleece the gullible "Judeo-Christain" public out of their money and to kept them out of the Word of the Living God through sensationalism. By the way, "Judeo-Christain Ethic"?, that is an oxymoron! Think about it! This book makes me very suspect about Grant Jeffery and others who are promoting the Bible codes. I was also given a copy of "The Handwriting of God", The Truth About the Bible Codes, by my sister-in-law. I thought Grant would come clean in that book, but it was not to be! Sorry, Grant, you lost a devoted reader!
